ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT COMMITTEE: MATH SPECIFIC:

Today I served on another Academic Misconduct Committee. It was an instance of alleged misconduct on a math quiz by a full-time math faculty member. The allegation involved using internet problem solving apps that were not allowed on the quiz. I was specifically recruited to have a second math faculty member on the committee for specific math related input. My input was given weight and credibility, and I feel I was a valuable addition to the process. It was resolved quickly and efficiently in favor of the faculty member putting forth the accusation. The result was a collaborative success between faculty and administration.

Hi Joyce,

I'm scrambling to find a second math faculty member to sit on an academic misconduct committee tomorrow (11/18) at 2:00pm. Would you be available to join us virtually? A faculty member has alleged that a student in his class cheated on a math quiz question. Both the student and faculty member will present their cases tomorrow, after which the committee will examine the information and come to a decision to either accept the faculty member's allegation or reverse the charge. If you can make it I'll forward you the meeting invite.

Thank you,
Jamie

11/17/22 update: Hi everyone, we are on for tomorrow, 11/18, at 2:00pm. If you haven't yet, please review the adjudication process in the student handbook prior to the meeting (starts at the bottom of page 53 and ends on page 59): <https://coloradomtn.edu/your-right-to-know/> (scroll down to Student Handbook). Thank you! -Jamie

Hi everyone, I am hoping you can make this time work on Friday to review a case of academic misconduct allegation toward a student in one of our remote real time math classes out of Salida. Both the instructor and the student will present their cases, after which the committee will make a decision to either accept the faculty member's allegation of academic misconduct, or reverse the charge. I've attached the latest version of the academic misconduct procedure that I am aware of. If you can't make it this Friday afternoon, please let me know asap so I can find a replacement. Thank you,
Jamie
